RESEARCH ACTIVITY

The research covers topics related to the history of comparative architecture, between the Far West and the Far East, in the period of modernization between the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. At the heart of his studies is the comparative and interpretive approach of architecture through the exploration of areas and experiences that see a strong Italian presence abroad and whose projects have opened new horizons in the reading of culture contemporary architecture. In this context there is an interest in Latin American architecture in the modern and contemporary age where the influence of the Italian contribution was strong. The main countries involved in this research strand are Colombia, Mexico, Costa Rica, Argentina and Cuba. Regarding the Far West, the countries most studied are Republic of Korea and Japan.

There are many strong cultural exchanges, both in art and architecture, that have occurred between the two extremes of the Pacific Ocean and hence the interest in developing this area of research. All this is also linked to Italy's diplomatic relations with both Japan and Latin America, where direct feedback in numerous institutional archives has been a valuable source for research dedicated to the cultural and methodological contribution of architects such as Battista Antonelli, Giovanni Buscaglioni, Angiolo Mazzoni, Riccardo Morandi, for Latin America, and Vincenzo Ragusa, Gian Vincenzo Cappelletti, Francesco Riccardo Monti and the works of the Jesuits for the Far East.

Circulation of ideas and hybridization of cultural models that have recorded, especially since the first half of the 20th century, interesting experiences that have compared architecture with art and engineering giving life to new pages of history architecture. With regard to the Italian territory, the research activities are directed to the study of architecture between the 19th and 20th centuries with a particular focus on the western area of Tuscany.
